The Smith Garden

By Maria Stewart

The Smith Garden is a woodland garden. It manifests Cecil Smith's love of the Oregon woodlands and their native plants. Cecil and Molly Smith started collecting rhododendrons in the 1940's at their old house which was adjacent to the wooded property they obtained in 1951. Cecil was an early member of the American Rhododendron Society (1947) several years before they owned the property.

Many plants in the collection are now 70 years old. Some that have acquired this distinction are the magnificent R. 'Loderi King George' and R. 'Loderi Pink Diamond'. If the season is favorable, you may see these wondrous rhododendrons in bloom and experience their fragrance. Cecil pruned these large-growing plants into their present-day, tree-like forms. The garden is on an ideal north-facing hillside and has adequate water resources.

Cecil subscribed to seed-collecting expeditions and the garden contains some species grown from that seed. Look for fine or unusual species including R. davidsonianum 'Ruth Lyons', R. crinigerum, R. rude, R. proteoides, R. trailianum and many others. There are many Cecil Smith hybrids also, such as 'Noyo Brave', 'Noyo Warrior', 'Cecil's Goal' and 'Yellow Saucer'. Cecil was among the first to grow R. yakushmanum and R. bureavii and to use them in his hybridizing. He combined those two species to produce 'Cinnamon Bear', the signature plant of the garden.

Molly and Cecil freely shared their garden and hosted many garden tours. No one interested in rhododendrons was denied a visit in the garden. In 1983, after more than thirty years of devoted stewardship, Cecil and Molly reached a point in their lives where they could no longer care for their garden. The Portland Chapter of the ARS was able to purchase the property after Cecil and Molly made it possible by selling their land to the Chapter at half its appraised value. The Portland Chapter, along with the help of the Willamette and the Tualatin Valley Chapters, assumed its care and management.

Haiku

Beneath the maple
 flickering shadows, glimmers
 of sunlight

Its flowers shattered, the peony reborne - keep
 in its foliage

Not even close - -
 between rain and sun - -
 this Spring's reign of rain

Smith Garden in Spring

Smith Garden

When the garden was first acquired, some committee members felt it should be preserved as it was when Cecil left it. Gardens do not cooperate with that concept. Plants grow too large and become too crowded. Weather disasters have significantly altered the site. To accommodate crowding in the garden, several new beds have been created and a semi-automated watering system has been installed.

Complementing the rhododendron collection are choice trees, shrubs, wildflowers and bulbs. Each pathway reveals its own treasure; a moss-covered log with plants tucked into bark crevices, a fern garden, and drifts of cyclamen, narcissus, erythronium and trillium. The Smith Garden is truly a botanical treasure.

The Plant Whisperer

On May 27, 2011, the American Rhododendron Society, to say nothing of a number of other horticultural organizations, lost a long-time, stalwart contributor. William Robinson, known affectionately as 'Robbie', passed away peacefully after a lengthy span of 94 years. Robbie was the last surviving charter member of the ARS (from 1945). His interest in horticulture was launched in his early 20's, when he abandoned a nudging to go into law and instead started work for the noted John Bacher of the Swiss Floral Company. After a brief stint with Bacher, Robbie undertook his long association with Portland Parks, where he advanced to and held the top position for decades. This underpinned and abetted what became his multifaceted interest in things botanical.

Recognised for his knowledge over a wide spectrum, he was ever ready to share his enthusiasms in much the same way as his celebrated cousin Linus Pauling, with whom he shared a pioneer heritage from the small eastern Oregon town of Lone Rock.

Having personally benefitted from his mentorship over the last approximately 40 years, I, as many others, say farewell to one who most certainly made a difference.

Crystal Springs Rhododendron Garden News

On May 25, 2011, in a big rain and hail storm, the crew at Van Veen Nursery at long last dug out the donated 'Cynthia' rhododendron. It was at the home of Tony and Sharon Nicola, a block from the nursery. Tony owns Merchants Paper Company and supplied a pallet jack. 'Cynthia' was thereby transported in honor to her new temporary home in the lathhouse at Van Veen Nursery. She is on a pallet and the Van Veen crew made a box of plywood around her and filled it with composted wood chips. Her next move is expected to be in October to the meadow at Crystal Springs, where she will join the other 'Cynthias' in the hope that the area will someday return to its former glory.

September 15th Meeting Preview

By Maria Stewart

Our first speaker of the fall season is a member and friend who hails from the north. Canada, to be specific! She is a member of the Victoria Rhododendron Society and formerly was a member of the Fraser South Rhododendron Society.

Her name is Norma Senn. You might have become acquainted with Norma at conferences and conventions. We had the good fortune to travel with her in China about five years ago.

Norma will speak about a subject dear to our hearts. The title of her talk is: “Walking in the Sasquatch’s Footprints: a brief history of gardening in the Pacific Northwest”

At September’s meeting you also have the opportunity to bring a few cuttings and acquire some cuttings, too. Kathy Van Veen will give us some tips about rooting our cuttings in our own homes. You don’t need a greenhouse to root rhododendrons!

So mark September 15th on your calendar. The evening promises to be illuminating.
